

OKOMFO APPIAH OF DROMANKESE CELEBRATES ANNUAL FESTIVAL

A powerful Ghanaian traditional priest, the Great Nana Okomfo Appiah of Dromankese in the Nkoranza North of the Bono Ahafo Region of Ghana and his shrine family are in the final stages of preparation towards a special annual Yam Festival in the community.

Nana Okomfo Appiah who was in the news recently with a call on Ghanaians to stop patronizing Sakawa and Sika Duro rituals (Internet Fraud and Juju Money Making), says that his festival is going to be one of kind in the whole region. Nana enthusiastically mentioned that the festival is in honour of his shrine's deities namely Tigare

Bofour, Adampan Sumyn, Mframa Bofour, Anfa Enfir Bofour, Mossi Bofour and Tongo Bofour.

According to Nana Okomfo Appiah whose many clients includes residents abroad especially in Europe and North America, the festival is attracting a lot of attention and this is evidenced in 2 important US based cultural and development organizations, the International Center for African Culture and Arts and the OBAATANPA House of Hope Inc. of New York and many individuals offering as media and other sponsors of the festival. He said his services has earned the shrine a popular name Aduro Y3 (Medicine Is Good). He said many important men/women with high spiritual energy and powers from Ghana and beyond are attending the festival and a lot of healing and miracles are going to take place.

Nana who maintains Facebook and Youtube account and has a website is very busy consulting and helping people who need help in business, education, marriage, travel documentation and legalization issues, court cases and all sorts of problem. A knowledgeable herbalist, Nana says, all sorts of ailments are taken care of by his powerful deities. Nana said, all healing comes from Nyame through His assistants who are the powerful deities. He said, all healing and problems can be solved and is mainly dependent on one's faith.

Nana says the festival is also dedicated to Ghana's elections in December, and prayers would be said for everything to be violent free, fair and peaceful. He called on all Ghanaians to come and join in a joyous celebration.
